Traumatic Development Experiences and Neglect: Etiopathogenesis and Hypnotherapeutic Strategies

Maltreatment and severe emotional neglect in the relationship between child and caregiver are considered "risk factors" in the genesis of serious mental disorders both in childhood and in adulthood.

From a nosographic point of view, the etiopathogenesis and evolution of traumatic disorders seems to affect the integrating functions of memory and consciousness, leading to severe dissociative symptoms.

This work will deal with presenting the most recent clinical research relating to the so-called "Traumatic Developments" and therapeutic intervention strategies through Ericksonian hypnosis.
